THREE MASSACRES. TWO DETECTIVES. ONE WRITER. ZERO ANSWERS.

Discover the book reviewers are calling a terrifying, impossible-to-put-down thriller by the author readers have named the next Stephen King.

Freelance journalist Kendall normally writes fluff magazine pieces, until she scores an interview with a survivor of a horrific mass killing. Suddenly she's the go-to reporter for the chilling crime: seven people brutally murdered with an axe and the killer dead at the scene.

Then another mass killing occurs. This time arson and ten eldercare facility residents die in the blaze. Then it happens again. A mother with a gun embarks on a rampage at a family birthday party. All killers die before they can be interviewed.

Investigating detective O'Grady wonders how evil can strike three times in only weeks. The crimes are far too coincidental. Yet the killers share only one common detail: none has a murderer's profile. No history of violence. No connection to terrorists. No vendettas. Ordinary citizens suddenly just became ruthless killers.

When Kendall crosses O'Grady's path sparks fly. And not the good kind. She reminds him of a past he wants to forget. While she can't understand the detective's open hostility toward her. Not to mention, he's standing in the way of a rent-paying story she desperately needs.

They will discover these killings form part of a plan far greater than just these crimes. A message is being sent and if the meaning is not deciphered soon many more will die.

About the Author

Susan May sold more than 100,000 books in 2016 and is an Amazon best-selling author.

Her books are usually found in the top ten in their categories and she's been ranked in the top ten Amazon USA horror authors since 2015. Her growing number of fans from all over the world have likened her immersive and page turning style to Stephen King, Dean Koontz, Robert Mathieson, Gillian Flynn and Ray Bradford.

She was four when she decided she would become a writer and packed a bag to march down the road looking for a school. For forty-six years after she suffered from life-gets-in-the-way-osis. Setting a goal to write just one page a day cured her in 2010.

This discipline grew into an addictive habit that has since born multiple best-selling dark thriller novels and dozens of short stories and novellas, many of which are published award-winners in Australia, the U.S.A and the U.K.

Passionate film lover since childhood, Susan is also a film critic with the dream job of reviewing films for a local radio station. You'll find her several times a week in a darkened cinema gobbling popcorn and enjoying the latest film. She sees 150 plus films a year on screen at the invitation of all the studios and, no, she never tires of them.

Susan lives in beautiful Perth, Western Australia with her two teenage sons and husband, while her mind travels to dark places most would fear to visit unless they love the dark side.
