Parenting Littles is Fun and Easy: Dispelling the Myths of Motherhood One Devotion at a Time By McKinley Rich

We're getting hit from all sides, aren't we, mama? While the world around us is offering up a plethora of recoMOMdations, we're sitting here covered in dried milk, wondering why our living room smells like pee, and watching our kids reenact the Rocky fight scene every hour. ON THE HOUR. The books and the blogs seem nice, but in reality we are up to our extremely-tired eyeballs in recoMOMdations, and all we really want is a good night's sleep and a little encouragement. Between these pages you will find raw, emotional and often hysterical words about one mama's time in the trenches. This is not a how-to book or a book of suggestions, but rather one mom's journey of how she found her purpose and joy as a mother in the place she least expected it—in the arms of Jesus. While the world is bombarding us with myths about motherhood, there are much simpler truths for mamas buried in the pages of the Bible (and we don't even need a Facebook link to find them). Snuggle in tight, friends. Let's dispel some of these myths together.

Editorial Review

Review

“Mamas of littles, McKinley is right there with you, scrubbing poo out from under her fingernails. I love this book filled with daily encouragement and funny anecdotes from the trenches of motherhood. McKinley manages to get us laughing about the toddler years while simultaneously pointing us to Jesus. If you’re looking for someone to walk with you through these early years of parenting, make you smile, and give you a booty-patting pep talk, you’ve found your girl.” Melanie Dale, Author of It’s Not Fair: Learning to Love the Life You Didn’t Choose and Women Are Scary: The Totally Awkward Adventure of Finding Mom Friends

“McKinley writes to moms in the trenches, offering them what they need the most: solidarity, biblical wisdom, and a razor sharp sense of humor. I laughed out loud through the book, nodded in agreement, and ultimately walked away from it inspired to point my kids toward Jesus by first running towards him myself.” Bekah DiFelice, Author of Almost There: Searching for Home in a Life on the Move

“I love how McKinley addresses the unrealistic expectations we moms of littles have for ourselves. Parenting Littles is a giant hug for those of us who feel like we might crumple under the weight of motherhood and a giant kick in the pants to keep loving on our kids when it doesn’t feel easy.” Becky L McCoy, Writer at BeckyLMcCoy.com, and Host of Stories of Unfolding Grace Podcast

About the Author

McKinley Rich is a mom by day and a writer by naptime. She’s a military spouse, a biological mom to two rambunctious boys, and a foster mom to whatever babes God entrusts to her. McKinley has a passion for encouraging moms of littles and believes that motherhood is only survived when moms do life together. She is most often found in her favorite cupcake flannel pajamas with a large cup of joe in hand – all while pretending she is in control over the children in her house.
