Editorial Review

Review

“A book that believes in progress obtained by non-accusatory action and truly makes people see another group’s perspective. It’s very practically organized to be used for training and to stimulate participation.”

--Fred Ciporen, president, Reed Press, former group vice president and publisher, Publishers Weekly

“As we move into the twenty-first century, guide books such as Leading Diverse Communities offer new insights and new principles around which we can organize our work and express our commitment to represent all of the people.”

--The Honorable Benjamin J. Cayetano, former governor of Hawaii

“For those of us seeking insightful guidance and effective strategies in inter-religious, interethnic dialogue, this book will be invaluable.”

--Rabbi David Saperstein, director, Religious Action Center of Reform Judaism

“Anyone interested in understanding and communicating the value of diversity will benefit from Leading Diverse Communities.”

--Carole Dickert-Scherr, vice president, human resources, Public Broadcasting Service (PBS)
